Hello,

We just amended our Collier County Animal Control Ordinance to allow us to offer three-year licenses tags in addition to our one-year licenses tags.

We would like to know how other agencies who offer one-year and three-year licenses manage the process. We currently have a colored license tag we use for a calendar year. We currently rotate through a different color each year so we know what year a license was issued base on the color tag an animal is wearing. Now that we are going to offer three-year tags as well, we want to know how other agencies handle it.

Does your agency offer one color of license for the year they are issued?

Does your agency offer one color of license for the year they expire?

Does your agency offer multiple colored licenses based on the year they expire?

Does your agency do something other than any of the above options?

If you offer multiple colored tags based on their expiration year, do you use outside licensing agents (vets or other) to sell licenses? If so, does this cause problems or are there issues with ensuring the correct colored tag is issued to the pet owner?
